

May 15, 2006

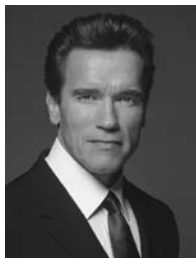

Government Technology Conference

I am pleased to welcome you all to Sacramento for the twentieth annual Government Technology Conference.

California is honored to host this banner event, considered to be the largest and most respected technology conference for local and state governments in the Western region. This gathering is an ideal occasion to exchange ideas, foster partnerships, receive in-depth training and encounter emerging technological solutions.

Progressive technology plays a vital role for governments as they strive to serve citizens as effectively as possible. Today, on-line information and e-services continue to expand thanks to the diligent labors of so many industry leaders. I commend everyone involved for making e-government a reality.

Your contributions fuel California's economic growth and help build a promising future for our state.

Sincerely,

Arnold Schwarzenegger